      G                        D
1     God is our refuge and strength,
        C                    D
      A very present help in trouble.
      G                      D
2     Therefore we will not fear,
      C                            D
      Even though the earth be removed,
          Em          D          C    D  Em       D              C   D
      And though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea;
      Em                 D           C      D
3     Though its waters roar and be troubled,
      Am                       C           D
      Though the mountains shake with its swelling.

                 G                                    D              C
4     There is a river whose streams shall make glad the city of God,
        Am                  G          C              D
      The holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High.
      Em                        G  Am                  D
5     God is in the midst of her, she shall not be moved;
       F                    C                    D
      God shall help her, just at the break of dawn.

      Em              C  D  Em                          C      D   Em
6     The nations raged,          the kingdoms were moved;
                    C      D  Am              D
      He uttered His voice,       the earth melted.
      Em              C  D  Em      D   C  D  Em
7     The LORD of hosts           is with us;
                    C   Am        D
      The God of Jacob  is our refuge.
